EMIGRATION

the prosecution's good faith in denying further information than that contained in the complaint.

City and County Attorney Cathcart remarked that the affidavits just filed, and in the possession of Watson would furnish additional information; beyond that the prosecution had nothing.

Attorney Watson then demurred to the complaint on the grounds, first, that no offence was disclosed under the laws, and second, that act 57 of 1905 was unconstitutional.

Judge Lymer immediately ruled that the act was constitutional and, after reading the complaint, remarked: "Mr. Watson, you will appreciate that this is a very inferior court. I do not take the court very seriously myself and I do not think the attorneys do. I feel, however, that the act is well framed and in view of the fact that this is an inferior court I do not consider it advisable to take the matter under lengthy advisement. The record will show that the demurrer is overruled."

Attorney Watson noted an exception, and demanded a speedy trial for Craig.

Attorney Kinney: "Do you demand a speedy trial for Baltazar?"

Attorney Watson: "You say I can not appear for him."

Attorney Kinney: "Our contention is that this is the first fruits of the attempt of Mr. Watson to represent two clients. The case against Baltazar is to be shunted to permit the case against Craig to come to trial. We know perfectly well that this would happen. We rely upon Baltazar in the case against Craig. Craig and his attorney bailed Baltazar out and have him on leading strings, and this is why we challenge them and do not propose to submit to have Baltazar put out of the way."

Attorney Watson remarked that counsel was in the habit of making wild and exaggerated statements not borne out by the facts, but beyond a general denial he had no wish to go into the matter.

Kinney reiterated his objection to the Baltazar case being displaced for Mr. Craig's, whereupon Judge Lymer remarked: "Ordinarily an argument for a speedy trial is one that appeals to the court, but at the same time the statements of the prosecution merit attention. The regular order is the one which the calendar shows, and everybody is entitled to a speedy trial, though the court is now in a position of a good deal of doubt. The court will look through these affidavits before finally deciding which case comes first to see if there is any reason why the order should be displaced."

To suit the convenience of Attorney Watson, Judge Lymer consented to sit at three o'clock this afternoon to consider the objections raised by Mr. Kinney regarding the appearance of Watson as Baltazar's attorney.

Has No Counsel.

In his affidavit Attorney W. A. Kinney stated that he had seen the defendant Baltazar in jail and among other things the defendant said that he was not represented by counsel.

Baltazar also said that prior to March 21st he had been ascertaining what Filipinos were willing to go to Alaska, but no arrangements were actually closed until after March 21st; that all the recruiting was done at Craig's authorization; that Craig had interviewed laborers prior to March 21st, Baltazar acting as interpreter. Kinney told Baltazar that if he (Baltazar) had done nothing in the way of recruiting himself and was willing to tell all he knew of the actions of Craig, he (Kinney) would recommend that Baltazar be used as a witness for the prosecution, and to this Kinney affirms that

DEATH COMES TO MRS HERBERT

Mrs. Allan Herbert died yesterday morning after a long illness. She was unconscious for many hours before the end, and hope of her recovery was given up on Saturday. The end was hastened by a fall she suffered last January, fracturing her left hip.

Mrs. Herbert was born in New York State on August 24, 1833, her maiden name being Albertson, and was seventy-eight years of age. After the death of her first husband she married Allan Herbert in California and moved to the Islands in 1872. One daughter was born to the couple here, Mrs. St. D. G. Walters.

Funeral services were held yesterday from the Herbert home on Keolu street at three o'clock, the spacious lanais being filled with the floral tributes of friends. The Rev. John Usborne conducted the services, interment being at Nuuanu cemetery. The pallbearers were A. N. Campbell, E. R. Stackable, Robert Catton, E. A. Mott-Smith and Colonel Soper.

Mrs. Herbert resembled her bereaved husband in the enjoyment of unbounded popularity and friendship, and all Honolulu mingles sorrow over her death with sympathy for Mr. Herbert.

Baltazar agreed. The affidavit further states that Baltazar was introduced to Craig by Deputy Sheriff Rose, to whom Craig applied for a Filipino interpreter, and that Rose was present when Craig told Baltazar to go and see the Filipinos, but not to make and arrangements until he (Craig) obtained a license, Rose having informed Craig that he must take out a license. After interviewing Rose, Kinney and Rose visited Baltazar, when the latter said "I did nothing until a license was obtained."

Seen By Watson.

The affidavit states that Baltazar seemed afraid of Rose. The result of an interview with Sampson, a Filipino from Waipahu, is also included in the affidavit, and in this Sampson stated that he was offered $150.00 for six months work, free passage each way and expenses. When seen for the third time by Kinney, Baltazar said he has been visited by Mr. Watson who had told him to say nothing but to refer the prosecution to Mr. Watson or Craig if they wanted any information from him. In conclusion Attorney Kinney contended that it was greatly to the interest of Craig to control the defence of Baltazar and that counsel for Craig would be representing a hostile interest if he also represented Baltazar.

Eight Witnesses.

Affidavits from eight Filipino witnesses, and also a Filipino interpreter, were attached, showing that Baltazar had from March 5th, or for two or three weeks past, been endeavoring to induce laborers to leave for Alaska.

Watson's Position.

Attorney Watson after reading the affidavits of Attorney Kinney, stated to a Star representative that the effect of them was to deprive the two Filipino defendants of Counsel. As far as he could see there was nothing to prevent him acting for Baltazar, though if there were any valid objection he certainly did not wish to appear for Baltazar. He explained that Craig, felt in duty bound to supply the defendants with legal advice, holding that though they were not guilty they had been dragged into the trouble through him. Watson declared that as far as he or his client was concerned they would be satisfied if the prosecution dropped the cases against the two Filipinos and used them as witnesses against Craig, or if the court assigned counsel to the two defendants. He did not want to see them deprived of counsel and could see no reason why he should not appear on their behalf.

E. J. ROBERTS, who is well-known in Honolulu, has the following paragraph all to himself in the San Francisco Examiner:

"Though rumors have been heard for some time involving Eddie J. Roberts in the light of a future benediction, it was only yesterday that the popular dock agent of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha and Western Pacific Railroad would admit the truth of the tale. Though he would not divulge the name of the young woman who has agreed to share his name and fortune, Roberts explained that in his experience of purser on the big liners he has observed so many happy brides and grooms that he determined some time since that as soon as the opportunity to remain on shore was presented he would hasten the happy occasion. The date will be announced later."
